

Book reviews are a highly valued component of our journal. These reviews demonstrate thoughtful engagement and contain stimulating insights about recent publications of interest to our readers. Our reviewers, some of the most knowledgeable scholars in the field, typically provide the following:

- 1) A careful summary of the work's central features, including its subject matter, organization, and how the argument is structured; and
- 2) Analysis of how the work contributes to the relevant field(s) of knowledge and/or theoretical literatures, including any perceived shortcomings.

Book reviews in Pacific Affairs are by invitation only. We do not accept unsolicited book reviews.

If you receive an invitation from us, we sincerely hope you can accept. Your review will contribute to our intellectual community, not only by informing readers about recent scholarly publications, but also by more broadly sustaining the practice of serious, careful, and diplomatic yet critical exchange that lies at the heart of the scholarly endeavor.

If you accept our invitation, kindly confirm your acceptance via email and provide us a preferred (physical) mailing address so that we can send you the book by surface mail. In the event that you do not receive a reply from us within a week of your confirmation, please assume that we did not receive your message and re-send it at your earliest convenience. At that time, we will send you detailed book review instructions, a book review agreement and a firm completion enclosed with the book.

Please note that we use the most economical shipping method available. For reviewers based in Asia and Europe, this means that you may not receive your book for 6 – 12 weeks.

Before accepting our invitation, please consider the following:

- 1) Do you have time to write the review within the specified timeframe? Please bear in mind that incomplete reviews result in disappointment for the book authors and editors, as well as losses in time, labor, and shipping costs for both the publishers and for Pacific Affairs itself.
- 2) Should you exclude yourself from writing the review based on a potential conflict of interest? Pacific Affairs is strongly committed to maintaining the integrity of the review process. We therefore prefer to exclude reviewers who are former or current advisors or advisees of the author, current departmental colleagues, former or current co-authors, previous reviewers of the manuscript for a press, or those individuals with a well-documented strong scholarly, ideological, or personal disagreement with the author.

If you have been invited to review a book for Pacific Affairs, but are unable to do so for the above or other reasons, we would welcome your suggestions for other reviewers who you feel have the appropriate level and type of expertise.

If you decide to accept our invitation, please consider the following prior to submitting your review:

- 1) Does the word count fall within a range of 800 – 1000 words (excluding the bibliographic information and reviewer information)? Pacific Affairs is mandated to publish a minimum number of book reviews per issue. Because we are a print journal*, it is very important that reviewers adhere to this limit. Reviews that exceed 1000 words will be taking word space from other reviewers. In the interest of fairness and equity in allocating word space for each review, our policy is thus to not make exceptions.
- 2) Does the review summarize the book's central features (including its subject matter, organization, and argument structure), and analyze its contributions to the relevant scholarly fields? We believe that our journal's readership benefits from concise summaries and fair engagement and/or criticism of the quality and significance of the information and arguments contained in the book.
- 3) Has the review been proofread for any typos or errors, and is it formatted properly? Specifically, we would appreciate your attention to the following:
 - a) Reviews should be type written, double-spaced, and written in Microsoft Word or Rich Text Format.
 - b) Reviewers should confirm that any diacritical marks are rendered correctly.
 - c) Reviews should not contain footnotes. If other works are mentioned in the review, please provide the full citation within the text – i.e., the authors/editors, the title of the publication, and (in parentheses) the publisher and year of publication. If direct quotations are made, please ensure that these are accurate and that the page reference is supplied (in parentheses) after the quote.
 - d) At the head of the review, please provide the following bibliographic information (please follow exactly):

FOREIGN AID, WAR, AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: South Vietnam, 1955-1975. By Douglas C. Dacy. Cambridge, London and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1986. xix, 300 pp. US$39.50, cloth. ISBN 9 7805 2102 1319.
 - e) At the foot of the review, please indicate your academic affiliation (italicized), on the left, and your name in capital letters on the right. For example:

University of California, Berkeley, USA

John Doe

Reviews should be submitted as an electronic email attachment to Ms. Fremma Esquejo at: fesquejo@pacificaaffairs.ubc.ca.

Once we receive your review, we will copyedit and conduct an editorial read prior to production in order to ensure that all reviews meet our general expectations for book reviews. At that stage, we will contact you with any questions regarding clarifications of substantive points, or corrections of technical matters. We feel that our attention to this process reflects the seriousness with which we take the book reviews.

We very much look forward to receiving your review and will send you an electronic copy of the review by email.

*We are now publishing some reviews in electronic format only. Please note that by agreeing to do a review for us, it may be chosen to be published only in the electronic format. These reviews will initially be posted on our website for up to one month prior to publication of the hard copy and remain for four years. Once the hard copy edition is published, an electronic edition will be made, and at this point, all "electronic only" reviews will be added, which will then be disseminated to our subscribers and to the academic community by our electronic provider, Publishing Technology, as well as several aggregators (EBSCO, Gale, ProQuest). An electronic copy of your review will be emailed to you. Permission to post the review on personal or departmental websites is granted.
